Description of fiscal impact

SB 559 provides for an option to appeal Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) decisions on permits for air quality, water quality, or strip, underground, coal, uranium or metal mines directly to district court. Currently, decisions on listed permits must first be appealed to the Board of Environmental Review (BER). A $100 fee is imposed to bypass BER and file in district court. The amount of revenue from this fee cannot be determined.

FISCAL ANALYSIS

Assumptions

Department of Environmental Quality

1. Appeals to district court will not increase legal expenses for the agency.
2. A fee of $100 must be submitted to the BER in order to bypass the BER and appeal a permit decision to district court. The number of permit decisions that would be appealed to district court versus going to the BER is unknown.
